PULLMAN is the ONLY line of Bed Davenports having all spring back and all spring seat construction—insuring the greatest possible ease and comfort.

The bed fixture in PULLMAN is simplicity itself. Aged people and children alike can easily and safely both open and close it.

PULLMAN Davenports have stationary backs—that cannot warp or get out of shape.
Nor can they fall and thus cause fright when you are sleeping.

PULLMAN Davenports are so constructed as to permit the use of a sufficiently heavy weight mattress—thus doing away with the
"sleeping on a pad" effect.

There are no hidden parts in PULLMAN—every inch of it is accessible to air—and they are very easy to keep clean. All springs and metal parts are rust-proof treated.

In a PULLMAN the springs you sleep on and the springs you sit on are two separate, and distinct things. You do not sleep on the upholstering—so that there is absolutely no wear and tear on your Davenport when the bed is in use.

The last winter farmers' meeting at
State College was held in February, 1919, when it was decided to change
the time of meeting to June, at which time a larger attendance could be accommodated at the college. Now, however, there is room for two such sessions a year, one in summer and one in winter. The week this year opens with a meeting on Monday evening, December 18, and closes at noon, the Thursday following. Further county farmers who are unable to spend more than a day at the college during Farmers' Week will find even such a limited visit well worth the time given it, the Farm Bureau assures.

"Dearest Helen: May God forgive me for what I am doing but there is no other way. Your happiness requires that you be free and this is the only way to make that possible."

With the letter was a newspaper clipping stating Mrs. Helen Leaman had filed application for divorce from John E. Leaman. There was also a check book on the Union Trust Company at Lancaster showing a balance of several hundred dollars.

PRIORITIES AND FEDERAL CONTROL INDUSTRY'S CURSE

Government Makes a Mess of It Whenever Trying to Run Transportation.

RECEIVERSHIPS BETTER

Whenever the government undertakes to run transportation it makes a mess of it, says the Manufacturers Record. Coal has no more right to priorities than food-stuffs, and food-stuffs have no more right to priorities than other lines of traffic. It could easily have been foreseen early last spring by any intelligent business man that there would be a breakdown of transportation this fall, and that whether the threatened strike was put into effect or not there would be a shortage of coal by reason of inadequate transportation, if no other reason developed. The Manufacturers Record persistently, early last spring, urged every coal consumer to lay in as large a portion of this season's supply as possible, and to do it at once, but with that disposition to put off till tomorrow what should be done today, a large proportion of coal consumers of the country failed to see and heed the warning and thus the country is now faced with an inadequate supply of coal and with a breakdown of transportation.

Food is rotting on the ground, because it cannot be shipped. The producers of this food are just as much entitled to a fair measure of transportation facilities as are the consumers of coal. The whole system of priorities is wrong. It interferes with every business operation. It hinders business development. It enables railroad managers who have failed to keep up with the needs of the country to excuse themselves before the public on the ground that they can only haul the things which are permitted by priorities.

If the government had kept its hand off of the whole situation and simply enforced law and order the railroads would have been compelled to increase their facilities if they had to buy new rolling stock through receiverships, certificates, and the country would have been left with the things which are permitted by priorities. The government has kept its hand off of the whole situation and simply enforced law and order the railroads would have been compelled to increase their facilities if they had to buy new rolling stock through receiverships, certificates, and the country would have been left with the things which are permitted by priorities.

The methods now prevailing simply tend to develop the idea of government ownership, but government ownership would be more disastrous even than what we are now facing. As radical as the suggestion may be, as strongly as we hope that it may not have to be brought into effect, the time has come when the railroads must increase their facilities as rapidly as it is possible for existing locomotive and car building plants to increase the supply of rolling stock without regard to temporary loss of income to bondholders or stockholders, if they cannot accomplish this in any other way.

To Mark Site of First Iron Furnace

A marker tablet indicating the site of the smelting of the first iron in Centre county will be unveiled on October 30, near the entrance to the grounds of the Pennsylvania State College. The stone tablet of the old furnace is still standing just outside of the town of State College where it was erected 130 years ago by Colonel John Patton and Colonel Samuel Miles, who were officers in the Revolutionary War. The tablet is to be placed there by the Pennsylvania Historical Commission and the department of history of the Pennsylvania State College.

The iron from this old furnace was transported to Pittsburg mills by mule-back, in the days long before railroads came into use. The furnace was operated from 1782 to 1809 and from 1825 to 1858, and marked the beginning of many similar industries in the central part of the state.

This will be one of the first industrial places so marked in Pennsylvania. The tablet will be presented to the college by George F. Donahoe of Harrisburg, chairman of the historical commission, and will be accepted by President John M. Thomas.

The old stack is but a few feet from a new section of state highway that is now being built into State College. Near by land is college property and plans are under way to make a park there with an artificial lake, offering bathing and skating facilities that are now denied the 3,300 college students.

REALLY IS "CRANE'S FOOT"

Word "Podagra" a Corruption of Term Which Was Applied to Idea by the French.

Perhaps, after all it would be more appropriate to call a family "tree" a family "crane's foot." When one speaks of a person's "podagra" he does not, at least consciously, mean to infer that this has anything in common with the foot of a crane. But this happens to be the literal meaning of the word, which like a number of others has found its way into English because of the difficulty in applying the proper pronunciation to a foreign phrase.

A podagra is, of course, nothing more than a list of ancestors, and this when blocked out in the manner dear to the hearts of genealogists, takes the form of connecting lines radiating from the common progenitor of the family to his descendants. The French, always fond of painting word pictures of familiar objects referred to a part of this nature as a "pied-de-crane," or crane's foot, on account of the resemblance between the two. The English appropriated the term both and translated it phonetically as "podagra."

Podagra.

In congress they tell the story of a certain faithful but successful representative. This gentleman's self-confidence has always been most marked, a dominant characteristic even of his extreme youth.

When he was about eight years old he decided to take a job during his school vacation, and accordingly sought work in a grocery. After he had been there a week or so his uncle meeting the old grocer, asked:

"Well, how are you getting on with William at the store?"

"I seem to please him," said the old grocer with a smile. "I seem to please him."

Confidence.

"You know this movie didn't cost $1,000,000."

"I'm not prepared to argue that question," replied the eminent producer.

"But—"

"Say no more. My publicity director says it cost that much, and I'm the last person in the world to doubt his veracity."

SLIMMER LINE'S FOR NEW COATS

Autumn Street Garments Are Made Very Straight and Are of Slender Appearance.

COATLIKE FROCK IN DEMAND

Type of Costume Dear to the Heart of French Woman Given Wearers Trim, Well-Dressed Appearance.

The clothes for each new season, when shown for the first time, naturally give rise to a great deal of discussion of fashions. They seem to turn things topsy-turvy in the realm of clothes for a few weeks at least. There is usually a universal impression that there are to be radical changes in fashions, an impression, however, which is usually a fancy. The New York Tribune, which is a bit of the multitude of ideas set afloat to be picked up by any buyer who fancies any one of them.

In very few weeks, however, the coat that has been shown in dress is adopted. We have not had any dress tic changes in fashions or anything very bizarre worn in a number of years.

Wraps of various sorts are claiming a great deal of attention at the present time. The one-piece dress, so universally worn, has made the separate coat very important. It took coat-makers some time to realize the harvest in store for them through the popularity of the one-piece dress. During the years that it has been the backbone of every woman's wardrobe the two-piece suit has periodically been thrust before the public in some guise in the hope that it would win its old place in popular favor.

Slimmer Outline.

Various measures of success rewarded those who backed these movements. Women always like a change and each time the tailored suit has been freed to the foreground they have eagerly ordered it, but the demand has quickly died out again.

One of the most definite tendencies in street coats for this autumn is to ward slimmer lines. While they cannot be described as fitted coats, they are more on the lines of the chemise frock that is very straight and of slender appearance. In fact, many of them look almost like dresses. Sleeves of street coats are undulating in line thus adding to the slimmness of the garment.

Velours de laine is still one of the favorite materials for daytime coats. A model in this fabric and typical of the latest developments in coats is trimmed with fine tucks, a type of trimming which seems to increase in popularity daily. An additional bit of trimming is added by the finished panels at either side, which are bound with braid. In colors, various shades of brown and black are favored.

Pancy hodge and black cloth are a further departure from the suit for women who have noticed the flapper ages. They have come to see that one is really never well dressed in a blouse and skirt after removing the jacket of a suit, and it is not possible to wear the suit jacket both indoors and out. To do so interferes with one's comfort.

But is very important as a trimming this season. Such trim as rabbit and squirrel are being dyed to exactly match cloths. These will prove formidable rivals to the more costly pelts.

Many of the new fur collars on cloth coats are of the standing variety, turning from the collar to the shoulders. The same type of collar is used on evening wraps. It may be made entirely of fur or of fabric edged with fur such as monkey skin. There is no abatement in the demand for monkey fur. This demand makes one wonder where all the monkey fur is to come from, for the fact is well known that this prolonged vogue has threatened the extermination of the monkey.

Autumn Evening Wraps.

While daytime wraps are slender, those for evening wear are voluminous. In the matter of color, too, the used for another model. The background of the cloth is beige, the stripe being in the form of a black cord which looks almost like an applied trimming of the black braid.

Demand for Coatlike Frocks

Coatlike frocks give their wearers a trim, well-dressed appearance and for this reason they should be especially popular. This type of costume for women has been dear to the smartly dressed French woman, who long has recognized its desirable qualities. It took the American woman some time to adopt it, for she ever has been a staunch adherent of the tailored suit for street wear, but each season for the last few years has seen pendulum swings far in the opposite direction. The shades for evening are as vivid as those for daytime are subdued.

In materials velvets and metallic brocades lead. Their metallic cloth woven on a background of color are most effective. They are used either alone or with lace or fur trimmings or in combination with velvet.

The evening wraps being prepared for this winter are extremely magnificent in fabric, in embroidery and fur trimmings. Embroidery is exceedingly beautiful, often a velvet brocade which is used to add a lining of silk.

Old-fashioned shirring is used profusely on evening wraps. It is seen in both vertical and horizontal lines. This is a favorite method of ornamenting evening gowns which are edged with fur.

Wrap to Match Each Gown

The amount of embroidery being used on all clothes indicates that those making the models for the new season firmly believe that women have not tired of this way of ornamenting apparel and, after all, they are perfectly justified in this supposition, for it is one of the oldest methods of trimming and one of which the fastidious world apparently has never become weary.

Black velvet wraps lined with white ermine or rabbit are among the luxurious models for this winter. The signers consider it well worth their while to spend a great deal of their valuable time on the evening wrap. For many seasons, while it was more or less of a costly affair, it was quite uninteresting.

Few changes were made in it from season to season, the reason for this being that most women bought only one evening wrap during the season or perhaps one in two or three seasons. Now those who have only one evening wrap for the entire winter are very old-fashioned, indeed. Smart women who can possibly afford it have an even or wrap to match or harmonize with each dress.

An interesting fashion note is the making of evening bags, purses or vanity cases to match each wrap. This is a very clever idea in which dress-makers and bag makers have united.

Gorgeous Fabrics

Gorgeous fabrics will hold the center of the fashion stage during the coming autumn. At the beginning of every new season strenuous efforts are made to divert attention from the previous season's styles, but shrewd dress-makers realize that it is next to impossible to compel the present-day woman to adopt a new silhouette that has turned their attention toward fabrics and trimmings.

There is something so penetrating in youthful about the simple straight-line dress, which has become almost a uniform that it is difficult to persuade women to accept anything else, although dresses with a boned tendency are claiming considerable attention for evening wear. With so little change in silhouette it is logical that fabrics and trimmings should become more interesting.

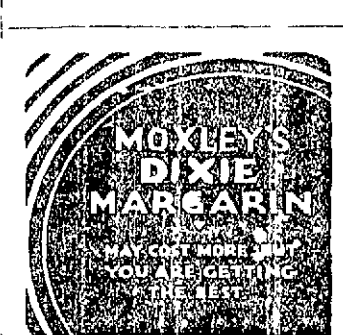

Never Mind the Engagement

You let that young man kiss you, and don't you're not engaged?"

"Yes."

"I should think you'd be ashamed of yourself."

"Not at all. What's the use of becoming engaged to a young man you're only going to see for two weeks during the summer?"—Detroit Free Press.
